SIX HURT IN AUTO ACCIDENT

Littlestown the Scene of Disastrous Auto Accident when Machine Takes Double Somersault. Some Severe Injuries.

In an automobile accident near Littlestown on Sunday afternoon six Waynesboro residents were seriously hurt and the machine demolished. The car turned two somersaults before it became stationary and three of the occupants were buried beneath the machine while the others were all thrown out on the road. Loss of control of the car is blamed for the accident. The injured are:

R. W. C. Evans, of the Geiser Manufacturing Company, severe injuries to the back. Mr. Evans' injuries are considered the most serious.

Mrs. R. W. C. Evans. Collar bone broken.

M. F. Sollenberger, cashier of the Bank of Waynesboro. Rendered unconscious for an hour and badly bruised.

Mrs. Sollenberger. Severe cuts and bruises.

Orville Sollenberger. Bruises.

Thirteen months' old child of Mr. and Mrs. Evans. Cut about the head and several teeth knocked loose.

The party were returning from York to Waynesboro and while going out the state road from Littlestown the driver was evidently looking for a cross roads and lost control of his steering wheel, the machine going into a ditch at the side of the road. In pulling out of this the machine turned over twice and when it landed was turned in the opposite direction from the one in which they had been traveling.

Mr. Evans was caught beneath the car with the Sollenberger boy and the Evans baby and after getting them out started to attend to the others.

About this time John Young, of Hanover, appeared in his machine and he hurried to Littlestown for physicians, Dr. Gettler and Dr. Crouse responding. Mr. Evans was the only one of the party not rendered unconscious in the accident. All were taken to the Ocker House at Littlestown and their injuries attended to.

A number of relatives from Waynesboro were summoned and arrived Sunday evening and today. Among their number is Dr. Sollenberger who is helping to attend to the injured.

NO DIPHTHERIA SCHOOLS REOPEN

Gettysburg Public Schools again at Work. Rooms Fumigated during Ten Days' Vacation. Diphtheria Scare Comes to an End.

After being closed for ten days on account of the diphtheria scare which had alarmed Gettysburg people during the past month the Gettysburg public schools re-opened today and started their real earnest work for the winter.

The morning and afternoon sessions were also taken up in regular order as it was not thought that it would likely be necessary to do away with the afternoon session on account of hot weather any more this fall.

The diphtheria which caused the closing of the schools has all disappeared and at the present time there is not one case of the malady in town. During the period when the buildings were closed they were thoroughly fumigated and it is not believed that there is any danger whatever from the disease from this source.

The attendance at the schools is large and active work is now in progress in all of the rooms.

John W. Vogel's big city minstrels will be seen at the Walter Theatre Thursday, October 6. The company is half a hundred strong and boasts of a roster second to none. Manager Vogel's reputation for being a standard bearer is enough to satisfy us that the performance will be in keeping with the heralding. The Radium Palace, a new and very elaborate first part setting, will be presented here for the first time, and it is said to be the most beautiful and costly affair ever used by any theatrical company in this or any other country.

SEVEN O'CLOCK MARKET OPENING

On and after Thursday of this Week the Time will be Changed. Protest Brought Result of Change from Nine O'clock.

So great a storm of protest was raised at Saturday's curb market over the change of opening hour from six to nine o'clock that the Market Committee has decided to change the new hour to seven o'clock. This will go into effect on Thursday and will continue until further notice.

Market Master Miller received numerous complaints and several members of the Market Committee of the Town Council, Messrs. Armor, Butt and Kitzmiller, also heard much dissatisfaction over the late opening.

The stall holders were very willing to have it changed to seven o'clock on account of the late sunrise and town people were also glad for the change on that account though some would like to see the six o'clock opening still in force.

It was not deemed best to make the change before Thursday as many of the market men would not have any way of hearing of the new hour before coming in on Tuesday. However, starting Thursday and until further notice the opening hour of Gettysburg's curb market will be seven o'clock.

GETTYSBURG LOST TO PENN

College Team Goes Down to Defeat before Strong University Team by Score of 29 to 0. Friends Criticise Style of Play.

The Gettysburg College football team went down to an ignominious defeat before the University of Pennsylvania on Saturday afternoon by the score of 29 to 0.

As has been the case in the past three years the orange and blue was completely outplayed and outclassed in every department of the game and in addition showed poor headwork in the offensive which resulted in allowing their stronger opponents much more frequent opportunity to advance the ball.

Only once during the game did Gettysburg make a first down. In fact there were only a few times during the entire game when the team even tried to make a first down, the orange and blue punting, and punting poorly, on the first down almost every time the ball came into its possession. This method of play has always been criticised by the followers of the games with Penn who contend that at least two downs should be taken before attempting to punt as the time would be used and there would be some chance of advancing the ball.

On every exchange of punts Saturday Penn gained from 10 to 25 yards and sometimes more. This was due in a measure to the fact that Dayhoff was hurried in his kicks through the Gettysburg line being unable to hold. As a result Penn would get the ball and after gaining a few times would punt. Gettysburg would return the punt with a net gain to Penn of a goodly fraction of the length of the field.

Only a few times did Gettysburg hold Penn for downs and the game was one of the poorest exhibitions the local team has put up on Franklin Field for many years.

THIRTY STATES TO PARTICIPATE

On Thursday of next week representatives of thirty of the States and territories of the country will meet here to make arrangements for the celebration of the semi-centennial of the Battle of Gettysburg.

General Louis Wagner, of Philadelphia, is the chairman of the commission and he has invited every commonwealth in the United States as well as the federal government to unite in preparing for the big celebration which will occur on July 1, 2 and 3, 1913.

On the evening of October 12 the commissioners will gather at the Columbus Hotel, Harrisburg, and the next day Governor Stuart will receive the members. The Pennsylvania commissioners will entertain the other visitors at luncheon at the Harrisburg Club. In the afternoon the commissioners will come to Gettysburg, where they will be received by Burgess Holtzworth and President Granville. On the fourteenth the commissioners will organize and make the preliminary arrangements for the celebration.

DIED AT TANEYTOWN

William J. Fink, of Taneytown, died Friday, at 10.30 p. m., from infirmities, aged about 84 years.

The deceased for many years was engaged in the agricultural and machine business in Taneytown, and was widely and favorably known. About seven years ago he relinquished business and lived retired.

Mr. Fink is survived by five sons—F. S. Pius and Joseph Fink, of Taneytown; H. F. Fink, of Hanover, and S. F. Fink, a resident of Kansas City, Kansas; two daughters—Mrs. Catharine E. Blumenauer, of Hanover, and Mrs. J. Gardner, of Taneytown. He is also survived by one brother, James Fink, of Irishtown.

Funeral Monday, October 3, services in St. Joseph's Catholic church, Taneytown at 10 a. m. Interment in St. Joseph's cemetery that place.

HEARD OF BLUEBEARD?

Of course you have—the old legendary fellow that had so many wives and treated them so dreadfully?

Well, there's another "Bluebeard"—one made famous by Helen Ware in the military drama, "The Deserters" now playing at the Hudson Theatre in New York City. This "Mr. Bluebeard" is a song and the song is a "dandy." The words are great and the music has a "swing" that makes the listener feel he has heard "real music."

By special arrangement the words and score of "Mr. Bluebeard" will go forth as a free feature of next Sunday's New York World. Order from your newsdealer in advance.

LOST between Eagle Hotel and Pennsylvania state monument diamond collar button. Reward of $10.00 if returned to Eagle Hotel.

QUARREL AT SUMMIT

Lindley Gilbert, colored, of Blue Ridge Summit, entered suit Thursday against Joseph Banks, who is charged with assault and battery, with intent to kill. Action was entered in Chambersburg before Magistrate Orr and a constable left for the Summit that afternoon to make the arrest. The story as told by a resident of that vicinity is rather dramatic. Saturday evening Banks and Gilbert got into a quarrel with the result that Banks was severely beaten. Gilbert is employed by H. H. Huston, and Sunday morning Banks, swearing vengeance upon Gilbert, invaded the Huston premises, riding a horse and fully armed. He wanted Banks to come out of the house but he refused. Following the assault and in fear of his life from the enraged negro, Gilbert went to Chambersburg in company with Mr. Huston, and entered suit.

UNCLE TOM'S CABIN

Walter's Theatre will have what will prove a big bidder for public patronage tonight and its attraction is to be Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe's great story, "Uncle Tom's Cabin," although as a result of some cheap productions touring the country this famous play has received ridicule at times, still under capable, conscientious management as that of Leon W. Washburn's organization, it will ever have the power to make its admirers feel the beauty and pathos of its lines. The Washburn Company, known for years to the public as Stetson's "Uncle Tom's Cabin Co." has a larger combination this year than ever—two Toppies, two Marks, carload of magnificent scenery for the stage, and the grandest street parade ever given by any theatrical company.

WILL PRESS BOYCOTT CASE

Won't Drop Suit Against Gompers, Mitchell and Others.

NOW BEFORE SUPREME COURT

Anti-American Boycott Association
Will Prosecute to Finish Contempt Charge Against Labor Leaders.

New York, Oct. 3.—The recent settlement of the long standing dispute between the Bucks Stove and Range company and the American Federation of Labor will not result in a discontinuance of the suit between the company and the federation officers now before the supreme court of the United States.

On the contrary, the case will be pressed to a finish, according to a bulletin issued by the American Anti-Boycott association.

The association, which has offices in New York, was formed some years ago to prevent labor unions from violating the law, and has secured a number of important decisions. In its bulletin Chairman Charles H. Merritt calls attention to a statement made by Mr. Gompers in the September number of the American Federationist to the effect that the lawyers for the American Federation of Labor had expressed absolute confidence that its contentions would be maintained by the supreme court, and says:

"Our members will be pleased to learn that the cases will be prosecuted to a finish and that Mr. Gompers and his two associates will not be relieved of liability for punishment for their contempt of the federal judiciary, and that this association is about to procure from the highest of human tribunals a final and decisive opinion involving legal questions of as great importance as were obtained by it in the Danbury haters' case when this court of last resort unanimously decided that the Sherman law applied to combinations of labor."

"There will now be decided the question to boycott; the question whether the right of free speech can be used as a shield for the protection of those who would spread the gospel of coercion and intimidation for the injury of property rights; the question whether the courts may issue injunctions to protect business from the ruinous attacks of conspirators; the question of the right to punish for contempt of court without jury trial, and the question of the right to defy an injunction which has not been modified or vacated by appeal or otherwise. In short, may the court protect property by injunction order and uphold its dignity by punishing those who violate such order. The questions of vital importance to the business interests of this country are to be settled by the supreme court of the United States in these cases."

The case is the one in which President Gompers, John Mitchell and other officers of the federation were sentenced to jail for contempt of court in the District of Columbia in failing to obey an injunction order.

NEW POSTAL BANK BONDS

Sharp, Clean-Cut Design Approved by Treasury Department.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Designs of the new postal savings bank bonds have been approved by Secretary MacVeagh, and by the time the postal bonds begin to receive deposits the treasury department will be ready to issue the new securities, if any are demanded.

The new bonds are entirely different from anything the government has ever issued. Mr. MacVeagh delegated the work of supervising the preliminary designs to Assistant Secretary A. Platt Andrew, who has spent a great deal of time and study on them. An engraving of George Washington is in the center of the 20 bond. The lettering is plain and square, perfectly straight and almost severe.

The old bonds told very badly, a fault corrected in the new. The coupon bond is the smallest government security ever issued.

Postal bank bonds will pay 2 1/2 per cent interest and come in denominations from $20 up. They can be issued to depositors in the postal banks, or by the trustees to replace bonds of the government now outstanding or about to be issued.

URGES LARGER BANK REDEMPTION FUND

U. S. Treasurer Wants 5 Per Cent. Advance.

Washington, Oct. 3.—Lee McClung, treasurer of the United States, wants to see a sanitary currency. In his annual report he recommends that the government increase its facilities for exchanging worn and dirty bills for crisp new ones and suggests that the public might be willing to share the expense of doing so.

Treasurer McClung makes a radical recommendation that the national banks be obliged to deposit a 5 per cent redemption fund for their notes early in January each year, in addition to the 5 per cent now required all year round. He declares that during January, April, May, June and July the regular 5 per cent fund is not enough because of the drains upon it. Consequently the treasury has to advance money for the banks.

The report states that during the year the government took in from ordinary sources $675,511,715, the largest sum in its history. The total stock of money of the United States in existence is $3,419,591,482, of which more than $1,500,000,000 is gold. The close of the year saw a little more than $3,000,000,000 in use.

The demand for small denominations of paper money is taken to indicate an unusual activity in circulation. Very nearly 300,000,000 pieces of paper currency were issued and more than 200,000,000 were redeemed at the treasury.

OBJECTS TO SENTRIES

President's Landlady Likely to Refuse New Lease of Summer Home.

Beverly, Mass., Oct. 3.—Mrs. William Howard Taft has been house hunting during part of the time the president has been absent from Beverly on his trip to Cincinnati and to Washington.

Inquiries have disclosed the possibility that the president's landlady, Mrs. Richard L. Evans, will not renew the lease of the summer White House. While no statement on the matter can be obtained, it is understood that Mrs. Evans has objected to the duty performed by the president's bodyguard of secret service agents.

It is believed that Mrs. Evans' friends and guests occasionally have been halted by the secret service men and requested to tell their mission in the vicinity of the president's house.

Drank From Boyhood Spring.

Newton, N. J., Oct. 3.—Ruled by the desire to take one more drink from the spring that he drank from often when a boy, Robert Ferguson, eighty-eight years old, a retired carpenter, of Easton, Pa., made the journey from his home to the Philip Hardin farm near Newton. He lingered at the crystal pool for two hours, drinking in all about a quart of the water.

A MENTAL PHOTOGRAPH.

Or Might It Have Been a Dream of a Somnambulist?

By EDWIN B. KERNOCHEN.
(Copyright, 1910, by American Press Association.)

In New Hampshire is a lake half a dozen miles long by from half to three-quarters of a mile wide where I once spent my summer vacation. The house in which I stopped was on a point jutting out into the lake, and sitting on a porch, I could look across a little bay to a wooded margin, with high hills beyond. Nestling under trees on the water's edge was a white house with a balcony overhanging the lake.

I would sit by the hour looking at this bit of water view and especially the house with the overhanging balcony. There was nothing remarkable about it. It was simply as I have described it. Nevertheless there grew up in my mind something strange, something vague, as though I was cognizant of a happening there. But what that happening was, whether it was then occurring or had occurred in the past, was not revealed to me. Nevertheless it seemed to me, sitting there looking at the place, that my mind was acting like a camera in which a plate after long exposure will receive and retain an impression too delicate to be detected by the eye; that something occurring or which had occurred was being revealed to me through some mysterious process. But why I was so impressed or what was the nature of the impression I did not know.

Being a physician and a student of the functions of the brain, it occurred to me that very hard study upon my specialty had affected my own brain and that I was myself unconsciously producing the phenomenon. Then, again, remembering what has been achieved in mind reading, transference of thought and kindred mental operations, I wondered if I might not be going a step further and receiving a "wireless" impression of something beyond my ordinary perceptive faculties.

One night—it was between 11 and 12 o'clock—I heard a voice under my window call:

"Doctor!"

I was used to such calls and awakened at once. Getting out of bed, I put my head out of the window and saw standing in the road a horse and buggy and the dim figure of a man.

"Doctor, you're wanted. Hurry!"

"What's the matter—somebody sick?"

"Somebody injured."

"Surgery case?"

"Yes."

"I'm not a surgeon, and I have no instruments."

"It can't be helped. You're the only medical man near by. Come at once. You may save a life."

There is a road running around the lake close to the margin. On this road we skirted the little bay and stopped at a house. It was white. The front door opened on to the road, the other side fronting on the lake. I looked up and saw on the lake side of the building an overhanging balcony. Lights were moving to and fro past the windows, and there was every indication of a stirring scene within. I knew I was at the house that had affected me, for we had come just far enough to reach it and there was no other house within a quarter or half a mile.

The door opened, and I passed from the man who had brought me to be received by an old woman. She was a singular looking creature dressed in a very old fashioned style. She led me upstairs to a bedroom, where on a four post bedstead with a valance about it lay a young man from whom the life was fast ebbing. A girl hung over him, while on a settle with his face buried in the cushions was another man, trembling convulsively. Others were about, but these three seemed to me to be the central figures of a tragedy.

I drew down the bedclothes and saw at once by the blood that the young man had received a wound. It was a sword thrust and in a part of the body where it was likely to prove fatal. The man on the sofa arose and coming to the other side of the bed watched me with a look hungry for an expression of hope. The girl stood beside me, also eager to catch a word of comfort. The wound had been staunch, but the flow of blood had not been stopped. There were no means at hand of determining what internal part the weapon had pierced or how deep was the stab. Besides, not being a surgeon, had I possessed instruments I should scarcely have dared to use them.

My mind was so far as the mind can be on two subjects—first, the scenes before me; second, the fact that I was in the house over which I had been dreaming. Indeed, I was in a state of mental confusion. An old man came to the door, wrung his hands, turned and went away. The view I got of him was only for a second or two, and the light where he stood was dim, for only candles were used in the house, but it seemed to me that he was dressed very strangely, and as he turned his back I saw that either his hair was long or something like a cue hung down behind. The young man standing opposite me was also dressed oddly, and the girl appeared to have put on a costume of her grandmother's.

"I have it," I said to myself. "These people have been to a fancy dress entertainment of some kind, and a tragedy has occurred there. The wounded man has been brought home, and the costumes have not been changed."

There stood those two young people, each hanging on me for a word of encouragement, while I, knowing but little more about the outcome than they, staggered by my strange surroundings, confused at being thus brought to a house that some unexplained means of communication had caused me to feel contained a story, knew not what to say to them.

Relief came when suddenly an ashen hue came upon the patient's face as though a white powder had been thrown upon it. Both those standing with me knew that it meant death. The girl sank down on her knees, with a sob, while the man opposite bent over the dying man and in a voice of agony cried:

"Come back! My God—I have killed my brother!"

I have a vague remembrance of people rushing into the room, among them the old man who had come to the door, who wrung his hands and turned away. Then there was an elderly lady in a cap and a broad lace collar. The last scene I can recall is one of all these people, some looking at the corpse on the bed, others at the man who had cried out in his remorse and pointing to his victim. The last sound was a wail from the girl.

I awoke from sleep with a start.

I was sitting in a wicker chair on the porch of the house in which I was living, looking out over the little bay at the house of the overhanging balcony. Dawn was breaking, and, facing east as the house did, what light there was shone upon it and enabled me to see it. The morning was serene—not a leaf stirring on the trees, not a ripple on the water. I felt just as if I had passed through such a scene as I have described. I was not inordinately disturbed. I had no feeling of having experienced anything supernatural.

True to the instincts of an investigator, I began at once to think of what had really happened. I might have dreamed it all, walking in my sleep and finally sitting on the porch. Or had I really been called up and visited a patient without having entirely thrown off slumber? My opinion was that I had passed through the scene I have described. If I had there must have been some foundation for that scene.

Creeping upstairs, I went to bed and to sleep. In the morning my first impression on awaking was what I had passed through, and it was as vivid as if I had but just awakened from it. I said nothing about my experience, but after breakfast set out to walk around the water's edge to the house with the overhanging balcony.

When I reached it I found it locked. Not a person was on the premises. It was, at least on the outside, in good repair and bore evidence of having been lately occupied. I walked on to the next house. An old man was in the yard splitting firewood. I asked him about the deserted house, beginning by inquiring how old it was.

"Dunno," he replied. "I been livin' here fifty years, and it was there when I came. They say it was built about 120 years ago. It's full o' old furniture that's been there ever since the place was new."

"Has it since been occupied?"

"It's sometimes rented to city folks for the summer season."

"Are there any stories connected with it?"

"None as I ever heered."

"Has anybody ever complained of ghosts?"

"Not that I know."

I spent some time endeavoring to elicit information that would indicate the house to be haunted, not that I believed it was, but I desired to eliminate this common superstition. I was looking rather for some interpretation based on natural cause and effect. I walked back meditating, but made no headway whatever, even in forming a theory.

I remained long enough by the lake to learn all that could be learned of the deserted house, but got nothing to bear on the case. I have no explanation to give, but my belief is that the scene I passed through really occurred many years ago, the secret having been perfectly kept. I have a fancy that my looking so long and steadily at the house, by some process yet unknown, imprinted the thrilling scene on my brain. There is no need for me to frame a story of a rivalry between two brothers; any one can do that.

MAKING NEEDLES.

Various Processes Through Which the Steel Wire Must Pass.

Needles are made from steel wire, which is first cut by shears from coils into the length of the needles to be made. After a bath of such bits as have been cut out they are placed in a furnace, then rolled until perfectly straight. Next the needle pointer takes up a dozen or so of the wires and rolls them between his thumb and finger, with their ends on a turning grindstone, first one and then the other being ground. The little steel bobbins are next fed into a machine which flattens and gutters the heads, after which the eyes are punched.

They are now complete needles, but rough and easily bent. Careful heating and sudden cooling gives them the necessary temper, and nothing remains but to give them their final polish. On a coarse cloth needles are spread to the number of 40,000 or 50,000. Emery dust is strewn over them, oil is sprinkled on and soft soap dabbed over the cloth, which, rolled tightly, is thrown into a pot with others, where it rolls about for twelve hours or more.

29 SAILORS WERE DROWNED

Toll of Victims When Barge Capsized.

STRUGGLE FOR LIFE IN DARK

Men Returning to Battleship Vermont Crowded Bow of Boat and Were Swamped by High Wind.

New York, Oct. 3.—Captain Rodgers, of the battleship New Hampshire, places the number of sailors who perished Saturday by the swamping of a barge in the North river at twenty-nine. Eighteen others are missing, but it is supposed that they merely overstayd their shore leave.

On board the New Hampshire sixty-one sailors with wet clothes were counted indicating that as the number who had been saved.

The high wind is supposed to have been responsible for the accident. The boat carried the men when she left the One Hundred and Fifty-sixth street dock for the New Hampshire.

They were the first of a detail of 350 whose shore leave had expired. The men boarded the battleship's barge, which was towed by a steam launch. After the launch, with the barge, had left the dock it was caught by the strong wind, and, buffeted by the flood tide, was running up stream at a five-mile an hour clip.

The river was covered with white caps, and the short tow line added to the danger of the situation.

In their anxiety to get aboard the New Hampshire, the sailors pressed forward in the bow of the barge. The unusual weight threw the prow under the waves, and tons of water poured into the boat. It was dark and in the confusion many of the tars lost their wits.

The majority saw that the barge was on the point of sinking and jumped into the river to try to make an effort to reach the launch. Some, who had more confidence in their swimming ability, struck out for the shore.

The men on the Louisiana and Kansas, who were watching the progress of the barge, saw the accident and raised the cry of "man overboard." Meanwhile the launch added to the cries of the men in the water and those on the ships with wild shrieks from its siren.

Strange as it may seem, many of the sailors from the barge were unable to swim. They had small chance of rescue, and even those who were at home in the water had to fight hard against the heavy wind and tide, which bore them up stream.

Fortunately a large crowd had collected to view the battleship panorama.

Scores of motorboats lay about the spot. Splendid work in saving the drowning men was accomplished, and it was not long before launches put out from the battleship to aid in the work of rescue.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MOTHER SEES SON KILL HIMSELF

Cut His Throat After Struggle With Her For Razor.

New York, Oct. 3.—Dr. Hubert B. Gudger, of Asheville, N. C., a young graduate of the University of Pennsylvania medical school, killed himself in a room of the Grand Union hotel while his mother fought with him for possession of the razor with which he was cutting his throat.

Dr. Gudger was twenty-four years old and was graduated from the medical school with the class of 1909.

Dr. Gudger's hard study at the medical school broke his health. On his return to his father's home at Asheville after graduating, it was decided that it would not be wise for the son to attempt to begin his practice immediately. He was brought to New York to see specialists.

The parents of the young physician, who had not left their son alone for some time, arranged between them that the father should go down to luncheon while the mother remained with the son, eating her own meal after her husband's return.

After the father left the room the son went into his own bedroom, adjoining and, removing his outer clothing lay down on the bed and pulled the bedclothing over him. He was quiet for some minutes and his mother thought him asleep. Then she heard a gurgling sound, as of some one choking, and ran into her son's bedroom. She found him lying in bed with a razor in his hand and his throat covered with blood. Mrs. Gudger struggled with her son in an effort to get possession of the razor, but despite her efforts her son succeeded in repeatedly gashing himself with the razor, inflicting fatal wounds.

The "Garrick" Clive.

As long ago as the middle of the eighteenth century a famous Georgian actress, Miss Kitty Clive, felt the call of the nerves commonly associated with modern women. The whole greenroom, according to the author of "Garrick and His Circle," feared her tantrums.

Her character stood high, but her clean, wholesome nature and honest heart scarcely offset her temper. She was the one player Garrick feared.

5 SUSPECTS HELD IN LOS ANGELES

Newspaper Office Blown Up and 21 Killed.

FIENDS TRY TO SLAY OTHERS

Labor Troubles Blamed For Bomb Horror and Other Plots to Murder. $2500 Reward For Perpetrators.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 3.—The police hope to force from Michael Eagan a confession that will explain the mystery of the explosion at the Los Angeles Times building, in which twenty-one persons lost their lives, and the finding of dynamite bombs near the homes of General Harrison Gray Otis, proprietor of the Times, and F. J. Zeelandelaar, secretary of the Los Angeles Merchants' and Manufacturers' association, and a personal friend of General Otis.

While they have no direct evidence against Eagan, the fact that he cannot account for his movements on Friday night and Saturday, and the fact that threatening letters were found on him when arrested lead the police to believe that he can tell important facts.

In addition to Eagan four others are being held by the police pending an investigation.

The city is seething with excitement. The city council met in special session and appropriated $25,000 for the purpose of determining the cause of the Times explosion and provided a reward of $2500 for the capture of those responsible for the outrage.

For twenty years, following a quarrel with the typographical union and the changing of the Times to a non-union paper, General Otis has fought unionism with every resource at his command. He has been ably seconded in this fight by the Merchants' and Manufacturers' association, whose secretary was the object of frustrated dynamiting.

The original suspicion of the police that the Times building disaster was due to a heavy charge of a high explosive was circumstantially confirmed by the finding of the other bombs and the statements of those persons in the building or nearby at the time of the explosion.

It is almost certain that the explosion occurred in a narrow alley that separated the two buildings occupied by the Times.

Foreman Graybill, of the composing room, in which the full force of the explosion was felt and where the greatest direct damage was done, is firmly of the opinion that it was due to dynamite in the alley. His statement is the clearest yet made. He said:

"I was standing near the center of the composing room, when all at once a terrific force from below seemed to raise a section of the floor clear to the ceiling. The upheaval came between two linotype machines. Frames and broken timbers flew in all directions. The force of the explosion was directly over the spot where the impact came through the floor. His body was hurled against the ceiling. E. A. Jordan, a head-setter, and E. W. Wasson, a galley man, were nearest to him, and they, too, were hurled against the ceiling of the composing room."

"Every one of the typesetting machines was thrown and hurled in all directions."

The explosion was heard for miles. All windows in the vicinity of the Times building, at First street and Broadway, were shattered. Between fifty and seventy-five employees were in the structure at the time of the explosion, and until the whole list can be checked over it will not be known how many lives were lost.

The building was equipped with gas fittings and the force of the explosion, tearing these pipes into bits, released gas, which was instantaneously ignited. No other cause but that of a dynamite explosion was advanced by witnesses except one, a Western Union telegraph operator, William F. Finnerman, who declared that he detected the odor of gas throughout the building earlier in the night and had called attention to it.

VOLIVA BUYS IN DOWIE'S OLD CITY

Gets Possession of "Zion" For $700,000.

Chicago, Oct. 3.—Wilbur Glenn Voliva, successor to the late John Alexander Dowie, has taken possession of Zion City as overseer, under the terms of an agreement with the receiver of the estate.

By the provision of the deal Voliva makes a loan of $700,000 from a Chicago company and in return for which he gives a trust deed for $900,000, the extra $200,000 being a premium for financing the deal. The $700,000 is paid to the receiver, and the estate, which includes more than 2000 city lots and other property, passes into the hands of Voliva. He must pay 5 per cent interest on the principal semi-annually, and every two years must make a payment of $100,000 on the principal.

The purchase gives Voliva undisputed possession of Zion City, with the exception of a few hundred lots and tracts of land.

Outside of these all the Zion property will be disposed of on the basis of the old Dowie lease, for 1100 years only, the provision of the lease being prohibition against the use or sale of liquor, tobacco, pork or oysters.

Voliva says even the children among his followers gave up their all, while several adults turned in all their property or will mortgage it to help pay for the estate.

BUG IN EAR BACK TO LIGHT

Matches Draw Out Insect Unreachable Otherwise.

Colwyn, Pa., Oct. 3.—A novel and effective way of removing an insect that had crawled into the ear of John Summers of Colwyn, while he was at work in Woolford's tank works, was tried.

Summers was not aware that the bug had crawled into his ear until it had reached the inner membranes, when he began to suffer excruciatingly. The insect tried to go farther, and the pain was becoming more unbearable every second, when one of Summers' fellow-workers lighted a match to make a better examination, and the pain suddenly ceased. The moment the match blew out, however, the pain began again, but as soon as another match was lighted and held close to Summers' ear the pain stopped.

Half a dozen matches were used in this manner, when it was noticed that the bug, an eighth of an inch long, was beginning to crawl out backward.

After half a box of matches had been used the insect, which responded to the light, had almost entirely emerged and was removed and killed.

Woman Poisoner's Victims Recover.

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 3.—The three children of Mrs. James S. Mann, the young wife of a Cherry Hill farmer who tried to kill them by putting carbolic acid in their milk, and who afterwards committed suicide with a shotgun, will recover, say physicians. The eldest of the children is three years old.

Nature's Hair Restorer

WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

One Great Reason Why This Great Hair Beautifier and Color Restorer Produces Such Remarkable Results Sulphur is a Natural Element of the Hair

When there is not a sufficient amount of sulphur in the hair, it loses its life, color and strength, turns gray, and falls out. There are many forms of sulphur, but only one kind that is suitable for treatment of the hair and scalp, and that is the kind used in preparing WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY.

We Have the Secret, and We Give You the Benefit of It at an Exceedingly Low Price

BALDNESS CURED

For two or three years my hair had been falling out and getting quite thin, until the top of my head was entirely bald. About four months ago I commenced using Sage and Sulphur. The first bottle seemed to do some good, and I kept using it regularly, until now I have used four bottles. The whole top of my head is now fairly covered with hair, and it keeps coming in thicker. I shall keep on using it a while longer, as I notice a constant improvement.

IN THE WORLD OF SPORT

Ed Geers, the Greatest of All
Harness Drivers.

Another harness racing season is about to pass by, and once more the honors are being showered on Ed Geers, the grand old man of the sulky. The running turf has had its Garrisons, its daredevil Fitzpatricks, its Isaac Murphys and its Tod Sloanes scattered through all the years, but not one remained in harness as long as Geers.

The grand old man of the sulky for thirty years has been a daring and successful driver on the grand circuit and is still, if not actually in harness, manipulating the reins with greater skill than any of his younger rivals.

Geers' style of driving is peculiarly his own. No other man has ever been seen who exercised such control over his horses with so little apparent effort. He sits immovable in the sulky, no matter what the crisis, never raising his hands, spreading his arms, bracing himself by lying back in his seat or in any way showing the employment of any particular physical force. Only on rare occasions does he touch his horse with the whip, and then with mere taps, even in an eye-lash finish.

Value of Trees in Streets.

A local instance is known of a man who purchased three lots in a new tract in Los Angeles, the middle one of which was directly behind a huge live oak tree which had been left in the street and neatly curbed. He was asked why he chose those lots, the highest priced on the street for the first offer also had an appreciation of tree value, and he replied: "On account of that beautiful tree. It will also shut off from view at least two houses on the other side of the street from one of my lots. We will then always feel more like being out in the country, with less of city ugliness."

THE WHITE WASH.

Its Presence on the Hudson Bay Company's Boat Explained.

It is or was a rule of the Hudson Bay company that no woman be allowed passage on its boats. One day some years ago as a steamer of the company neared one of the northern-most ports a string of white garments was seen stretched across the deck. The watchers were amazed, for to them the wash line suggested only the presence of a woman aboard the boat. Comment was freely made of the scandal that would ensue and the shakeup that would follow. When the boat docked the line of washing had disappeared—still another proof of the scandal.

Later one of the landmen said to the captain:

"Why, how did it happen that you carried a woman passenger this trip?"

"There was never a woman along the whole voyage," was the indignant answer. "What do you mean?"

"If there was no woman aboard where did all that white wash come from?" was the triumphant reply.

The captain looked puzzled for a moment, and then he laughed.

"Oh," he said, "and didn't we have Lord Strathcona, the governor himself, along with us on this trip? And every day doesn't he insist on having his clean white shirt, no matter how far north we are? That's the white wash you saw strung along deck. And, what's more, doesn't his lordship insist upon having his London paper laid beside his plate every morning, no matter if it is a year old?"—Pearson's.

A MASTER OF METAPHOR.

It Must Have Relieved Him to Get This Out of His System.

A water consumer in a certain city, whose supply had been turned off because he wouldn't pay, wrote to the department as follows:

"In the matter of shutting off the water on unpaid bills your company is fast becoming a regular crystallized Russian bureaucracy, running in a groove and deaf to the appeals of reform. There is no use of your trying to impugn the verity of this indictment by shaking your official heads in the teeth of your own deeds.

"If you will persist in this kind of thing a widespread conflagration of the populace will be so imminent that it will require only a spark to let loose the dogs of war in our midst. Will you persist in hurling the cornerstone of our personal liberty to your wolfish hounds of collectors thirsting for its blood? If you persist the first thing you know you will have the chariot of a justly indignant revolution rolling along in our midst and gnawing its teeth at its rolls.

"If your rascally collectors are permitted to continue coming to our doors with unblushing footsteps, with cloaks of hypocritical compunction in their mouths, and compel payment from your patrons this policy will result in cutting the wool off the sheep that lays the golden egg until you have pumped it dry, and then farewell, a long farewell, to our vaunted prosperity."—Everybody's.

When to Eat Fruit.

To obtain the most benefit from the succulent fruits they should be eaten at the end of the chief meal. Bananas are an exception and may be eaten with any meal. They are very acceptable cut in thin slices and eaten with bread and butter. Stewed fruits often have their virtues wasted through being eaten at the wrong time. Six or eight stewed prunes half an hour before breakfast are beneficial; so are stewed figs or stewed apples eaten before breakfast. Peeled oranges cut into thin slices so that the juice is set free, with sugar strewn over the slices, are not unlike pineapple and form a highly efficacious aid to digestion. Grapes should never be eaten except after the chief meal of the day. Taken when the stomach is comparatively empty, they are a specially harmful fruit.—Family Doctor.

Ruler of Russia's Title.

The general allusion to the ruler of Russia as the czar, is strictly speaking, incorrect. His official title is "emperor and autocrat." Czar is the old Russian word for lord or prince and was abandoned by Peter the Great on his triumphant return from Poltava, his crowning victory over Charles XII. of Sweden. Since then the Russian monarch has been officially entitled emperor, and at the congress of Vienna in 1815 his right to the imperial term was admitted by the powers, with the proviso that, though he was emperor, he had no precedence over the kings of western Europe.—St. James' Gazette.

The Modern Idea.

Roman Guide (impressively) — The ruins of the Coliseum? Seattle Man (astonished)—Well, what do you think of that? Why, I saw photographs of that heap twenty years ago. Roman Guide (joffily)—Quite likely, sir. Seattle Man—But why in thunder aren't those ruins cleared away and a modern Coliseum erected?—New Orleans Picayune.

Unless.

Townsend—Can a man live on $1 a day? Beers—Certainly, unless he's so prodigal as to lay something aside for a rainy day, keep up his insurance, eat when he's hungry, buy clothes and pay his bills.—Chicago News.

Flight.

"Would you take $10,000 to fly from Albany to New York?"

"Why not? Our cashier took only $1,000 to fly to Europe."

Pressed Beef.

Select a piece which is suitable for a pot roast, weighing about four pounds. Put into a kettle with enough boiling water to cover one-half of the meat. Cook slowly one hour, then add a bit of bay leaf, a level teaspoonful of salt and a little pepper. Cook until the meat will fall in pieces, take from the liquor, cool a few minutes and chop fine. Pack closely in an earthen bowl. Cook the liquor until reduced to three cupfuls and pour hot over the meat. When cold slice thin and garnish with parsley.

APACHES OF PARIS

Night Prowlers Whose Trade is Murder and Robbery.

THE TERROR OF THE POLICE.

These Desperadoes Rarely Use a Gun, but Work With the Knife, the Stilet, or by "Tolling"—They Have a Short and Bloody Career.

There are very few nights in the year when Paris policemen on their rounds do not stumble upon a body lying in a gory pool. Sometimes the handle of a long, slender knife protrudes between the shoulder blades; sometimes an ugly gash bleeds from ear to ear; not seldom blood oozes from mouth, nose and ears, as though the dead had not sustained any apparent wound, or three little starlike bruises may dot the temple, or a bluish line an inch wide may mar the back of the neck, just above the collar line. "Les Apaches," the "cops" whisper to each other (for Parisian police officers always go two by two), and they call for an ambulance, much relieved not to have witnessed the incident.

The steel blade, the blackjack, the brass knuckles, will serve the purpose of the Apache, according to his victim's size and presumable strength. For a prey of small stature, however, the Apache reserves what in his slang he calls "tolling." A sharp blow dazes the victim and throws him down; the Apache's knees bore themselves into the chest, while his hands seize the ears, lift the head and slam it a couple of times on the pavement until a duller thud tells of a fractured skull.

Until an Apache is an adept at "sticking" his man in very much the same way in which a Spanish toreador dispatches a bull, with a single thrust between the shoulders, or at cracking a skull bone at one slam, he is held in little esteem and never allowed to tackle "big jobs" in a dangerous neighborhood, for Paris is a well policed city. The night hawk must strike like lightning, empty the dead man's pockets in a wink and sink away into the dark. Therefore Apaches very seldom carry guns; the knife is silent. Tolling, too, is safe—so many people are known to have slipped and fractured their skulls! Unless the victim is especially well dressed there is not much of an inquiry.

When it is all over the gang, which scatters like a flock of frightened sparrows, meets again at some wine-shop where no one is welcome who is not "in the business."

Apaches never try to conceal their social status. Their very clothes are a sort of warning to the public. They even affect a peculiar walk, the body bent from the loins, shoulders hunched and hands plunging deep into the trousers pockets. But who would dare to molest them?

The Apache is a marked man. He joins a gang at three or four and twenty, and by thirty or thirty-five he has gone. The maws of a jail hold him for the balance of his earthly existence. He knows that. He expects it. Therefore while his freedom lasts there is no desperate chance he will not take to get at the gold that alone could save him.

Apaches are not born; they are made—made by the peculiar laws of France. Every citizen of the republic, without distinction of rank or class, must serve under his country's flag for two years. Only the physically unfit escape that servitude. At the end of his term in the ranks every Frenchman seeking employment must present as means of identification his certificate of honorable discharge.

Then it is that tragedy looms up for some unfortunate. Woe to the one whose certificate mentions the "African battalions!"

The African battalions, garrisoned at the edge of the Sahara desert, are made up of all the boys who had the misfortune of being arrested before they reached the age of twenty-one. Trivial as their offenses may have been, whether they were due or not to the indiscreet exuberance of youth or to some absurd entanglement, they are sent to the desert outposts, kept on convict fare, sleeping mostly in trenches which they dig, watched over by sentries that shoot to kill.

Under the broiling sun that lays them down fast with fever and cholera they build roads, creep over the next day by the sand. They are "the front" whenever Arabs or Moroccans threaten to shake off the French yoke. When they fall by the wayside they are tied to a horse's tail. When they protest spurs cause the horse to rear.

And when the creepy water of sand wells, bullets from the sentries or from the nomads and the hoofs of vicious horses have spared them they return to their native city with hatred in their hearts, with the loathsome memories left by association with the depraved and the morally diseased.

They return to their native city to find doors and hearts locked to them. Their military book, which they must produce, proclaims them jailbirds. Who wants to employ an ex-convict? During their two years in the African inferno they have atoned for their errors of the eighteenth or nineteenth year. For the second time they have settled their account with society. And now society refuses them a chance to show that they have (for some of them have shed the old hide, to prove that a new heart is beating in their breasts.

Hard is the plight of an ex-convict in France.—Andre Fricton in New York Tribune.

Helping Him Along.

"What is all this straw doing in the roadway? Somebody sick?" asked the man passing.

"Easy!" said the man at the gate, holding up a warning finger. "There's a young man calling on my daughter tonight who has been coming to see her for six years. He's very easily frightened. We hope he's going to propose tonight, and we are taking every precaution against his being startled!"—Yonkers Statesman.

Self Heating Flatiron Keeps
Hot For Hours.

An improved form of self heating flatiron is shown herewith, the invention of a Minneapolis man. Not only does the iron keep hot for about two hours and a half at one filling of alcohol, but the heat can be regulated. In the body are the wicks, and to the rear rises a cylindrical tank which holds a half pint of alcohol. From this tank the liquid flows down to the wicks, which can be turned up or down by a key at the back. The filler plug is protected with a safety device, so there is practically no danger of explosion in any way. It takes only a few minutes to have the iron ready for use, and the implement is said to remain heated for two hours and a half on a half pint of alcohol.

Hygiene can prevent more crime than any law. Munsterburg.
